Is a U.S. Military Assault on Iran Next?

The Bush administration says Iran doesn't have a right to nuclear technology and won't rule out a military strike to prevent it. That's different than during the Shah's brutal dictatorship when the U.S. gave Iran easy access to the credit and technology needed for nuclear power and weapons. But in 1979, the Shah - who played the role of policeman for the U.S. and butchered upwards of 25,000 people was thrown from power by the Iranian people. The revolution set back the plans of the imperialist powers in the region. Now with the military already engaged in Iraq, Bush wants to retake what they once had in Iran. Our movement has to block an even more dangerous war in the Middle East. Join us in discussion at this important public meeting!
