"The Invisible Mexicans of Deer Canyon" is a film that documents the lives of Mexican migrants living in the hills of San Diego County. John Carlos Frey spent over a year visiting and living amongst the migrants of Deer Canyon. He traveled alone carrying all of his sound, camera and lighting equipment. Many of the migrants were initially reluctant to talk to Mr. Frey. As his trips to the canyon became more frequent, the migrants began to trust and invite him into their homes for a personal look at their lives.
